Leadership is the effect you have on others it's not about your title

Exercise 1

There is a Green envelope on the tables
This contains Envision picture cards
Pic a card and discuss in your groups
what risk means to you?

These are some of the answers from Leaders

Lillian Cringles Chief Social Work Officer

This shows that whilst we all come from a different starting point, when we combine as one and develop a connectivity together we can manage and minimise the impact of risk , whatever this may be.

This picture shows me that the cross over of skills, knowledge and function, all need to entwine to produce the effective outcome.

As with wiring, if one element is dysfunctional the system will fail.

Ian Anderson
T/Group Manager Prevention & Protection
Scottish Fire & Rescue Service

All people are different

Our day to day challenges in life are different

The perception of risk is also different from one person to the next

Unfortunately risks can cause harm in many forms – both mental and physical

By working in partnership we can support those most at risk within our communities to reduce risk and live a healthier, safer and happier life.

Stephen Stiff T/Superintendent Support & Service Delivery Police Scotland

"We all live with risk every day. We cannot avoid risk so the key is to manage it effectively.

To manage risk is to understand the likelihood of something happening which may adversely affect the safety and wellbeing of people and property, and if that 'something' was to occur, to understand the impact upon not only an individual but the wider community for the short, medium and long term.

Risk is considered at every stage of decision making and actions taken should reduce the likelihood, mitigate the impact or both. Assessment of risk allows resources to be deployed in the right place at the right time and promotes effective prioritisation of tasks. Most importantly, it keeps people safe."

Dale Meller – Professional Social Work Adviser Scottish Government

I believe that really understanding risk, by gathering information, is like finding jigsaw pieces from different sources. It's difficult to fully understand risk without all the pieces being fitted together.

Similarly, I believe that managing risk (through supporting and protecting vulnerable people) also requires multiple pieces of the 'system' to fit together, like a jigsaw.

The whole is greater than the sum of the parts.

As such, a jigsaw reminds me of the multi-agency frameworks provided through ASP which, when pulled together, act to reduce and manage risk.

Rosie Black

ASP Lead Officer D&G

The lighthouse signifies solitude for some - for others it is a guiding light - To protect people from harm.
